This book describes in detail how the Army trains to win in diverse situations and on different terrains, to overcome strenuous environments and avert all types of attacks. With that focus, the Army develops training readiness and the capabilities that support Army and joint force of the commanders. The authors expended the fundamental concepts of the Army's training doctrine. This reading focuses on training leaders, Soldiers, and Army Civilians as effectively and efficiently as possible given limitations in time and resources.

information. The authors are practicing engineers, not theoretical people from academia, and their from-the-trenches advice has been repeatedly tested in real-life applications. Expanded coverage includes descriptions of overseas manufacturer's products and concepts, model-based optimization in control theory, new major inventions and innovations in control valves, and a full chapter devoted to safety. With more than 2000 graphs, figures, and tables, this all-inclusive encyclopedic volume replaces an entire library with one authoritative reference. The fourth edition brings the content of the previous editions completely up to date, architecture concepts of DTMs for communication connection devices and remote I/Os. An introduction to the FDT style guide describes the interface between the end user programmer. This title is oriented equally towards corporate decision-makers, developers industrial automation companies who provide devices and systems, and system integrators. Readers will be able to gain an appreciation for the importance of FDT technology for products, to initiate DTM developments and to integrate FDT-based components into systems. This book is based upon Version 1.2 of the FDT specification and its addendum.

The Military Standards Phase I methodology project was established to investigate the disparities observed during the evaluation of draft technical manuals (DTMs) at USAEPG. The objective of the investigation was to develop a concise and effective method with which to prepare and evaluate technical publications within TECOM and the Army. It was found that the numerous standards available to prepare DTMs contain repetitive requirements. These requirements were found to be either exactly the same or titled the same but contained differing (negating) instructions. The investigation collected and categorized these deficiencies to substantiate the recommendation to revise present DTM preparation and evaluation processes. The final analysis documents the need to not only standardize the 'specifications' but to eliminate manual methods of evaluating DTM requirements such as grammar, format, style, and readability, replacing this with the commercial off-the-shelf software programs. In addition, it is recommended that an expert system 'process' be investigated in the second phase of this project to eliminate skewed evaluation results and assist the preparers of DTM contracts and manuals at the development stage. The hope is that this method will eliminate shortfalls with a primary resource (technical
