When The God Who Hung on the Cross was published in 2003, readers all over the world resonated with its powerful stories of hope and faith. They said the book challenged them to trust God more and to climb out of their spiritual status quo. Seeing God at work in some of the world's most unlikely places expanded their vision of what God could do in their own lives. They wanted a sequel. Now, Janice Rosser Allen and Ellen Vaughn have written a compelling follow-up book that takes readers to new, exotic locations, wild adventures, and a vivid, fresh understanding of God's power. You'll meet courageous men and women whose faith is flourishing in the face of ISIS and other terrorists. You'll weep at believers' suffering and losses, and laugh at the creative audacity of indigenous church planters who just won't take no for an answer, whether in the former Soviet Union, in the corners of India where Hindu extremists are burning churches, in communist holdouts in other parts of Asia, or in challenging places in Africa and Latin America. You'll meet Janice Allen as well, and you'll relate to her story, which painfully deviated from the neat script she had planned. Janice's journey, woven together with the narrative of International Cooperating Ministries, reminds us that against all odds, there is always hope

Language is the species-specific human version of the animal system of communication. In contrast to non-human animals, language enables humans to invent a plurality of possible worlds; reflect upon signs; be responsible for our actions; gain conscious awareness of our inevitable mutual involvement in the network of life on this planet; and be responsibly involved in the destiny of the planet. The author looks at semiotics, the study of signs, symbols, and communication as developing sequentially rather than successively, more synchronically than diachronically. She discusses the contemporary phenomenon that people in today's society have witnessed and participated in, as part of the development of semiotics. Although there is a long history preceding semiotics, in a sense the field is, as a phenomenon, more "of our time" than of any time past. Its leading figures, whom Pettrilli examines, belong to the twentieth and twenty-first century. Semiotics is associated with a capacity for listening. This capacity is also the condition for reconnecting to and recovering the ancient vocation of semiotics as that branch of medical science relating to the interpretation of signs or symptoms. The pragmatic aspect of global semiotics studies the impact of language or signs on those who use them, and looks for consequences in actual practice. In this respect, Pettrilli theorizes that the task for semiotics in the era of globalization is nothing less than to take responsibility for life in its totality.
