3rd Grade Writing Goals. While all children develop at different rates, these are goals to help you understand how writing should be progressing during the school year. Third graders are expected to write throughout the day at school. For each subject they will be responding to questions, taking notes, writing in a journal, or composing a story. Children can understand written instructions and follow them without the help of an adult.

Third graders begin to show a wide range of emotions (not just angry, happy or sad) and are able to express those emotions in a socially appropriate manner. In third grade, the academic expectations are much tougher than they were in second grade and can often cause frustration or feelings of inadequacy. Being able to express frustration, confusion or pride effectively is key in asking the teacher for help when it's needed.
